MagPump is releasing two new loaders that deliver on the company's promise to handle large-capacity, high-frequency magazine loading for 9mm and AR-15 magazines. The two new magazine loaders are a hybrid of MagPump's existing models and prove to be more robust than the standard units. Both the 9mm PRO and the AR-15 PRO have a lightweight polymer exterior for easy transportation to and from the shooting range, with strong, metal internal components that produce reliable operation while loading hundreds of rounds in one sitting.

“With the success of both our standard 9mm and AR-15 magazine loaders, we wanted to create a second line of loaders that will take a beating from those shooters who are consistently on the range or training,” said Pete Crawford, MagPump President and CEO.

All MagPump models are easy to use and eliminate hand fatigue, reducing magazine loading time by more than 50 percent. Simply load the ammunition in the high-capacity hopper and let MagPump do the rest. The pump-action lever self-sorts ammo and loads 30 rounds in less than 30 seconds. Backed by its lifetime, no-questions-asked guarantee, MagPump magazine loaders are the best in the business and allow shooters to spend more time shooting and less time loading.

MSRP for the PRO Series loader is $249.99.
